INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

This Appendix is designed especially for use in the study of the Greek language in preparation for college. It aims, therefore, to contain all the proper and geographical names found in those Greek works usually read in such preparatory study, which are Xenophon's Anabasis, the first two Books of Xenophon's Hellenica, the first six Books of the Iliad, and the first two Books of the Odyssey. A brief treatment has been necessary, in order to keep within reasonable limits; it has been the intention, however, to omit no really necessary item of information, but to give the most important facts in a condensed form. No attempt has been made to give a complete account of the various views on points where there is difference of opinion. The purpose has been, rather, to present the view which seemed to be preferable, and, where there exists reasonable doubt concerning any statement made, to indicate the fact.
